PREFACE

Love.

You create harmony in my inner existence, until you make me lose myself in the cosmic dimension of a “non-existence”. There, time and space lose the dimension of their essence, until they confuse themselves with nothing.

Dream of an inner nature, an astral consciousness that creates the reality for a human being.

This way we experience moments of existence that seem eternal, full of sensory qualities which have never been tried before. The human being perceives himself/herself, he pushes his fingers on the other’s skin, perhaps trying to understand himself/herself. Is it a nice dream or is it really true?

The sense of touch, of warmth states your presence, confirming to me that you are there, that you exist.

Now I have to understand what I am living, my mind analyses each perception that the world sends to it. It makes calculations and intertwines until it gets lost in prime numbers, no longer divisible. Perhaps the essence of the whole, perhaps the essence of an eternal union.

The mind is exhausted by its wandering. Finally it abandons its way towards knowledge and accepts the facts of a moment of ecstasies.

There exists nothing more wonderful than living the power of an astral-spiritual union. Meeting again, merging without hesitation, without questions for a tomorrow that there will not be.

Now, eternal present, you are within us, you are a breath of joy.

We can experience this dimension when I withdraw and leave room for you to expand, when my manifestation finds open space in your being welcoming.

All this is possible when the two souls perceive each other in their deepest essence. All this will happen only then. If this affinity does not exist, it will be difficult for us to swing on the cosmic wave of life. We will manifest our difficulties hurting the world that surrounds us and the human being that accompanies us in life.

How could the relational world of the couple be if we found some systems of comprehension and knowledge concerning the potential dynamics of love?

After all, could this be true?

Or is it an imaginary dream, without a real correspondence with our world?

Personally, I believe that the world constantly gives pieces of information that help us going the way of our life. The iris is one of these systems. It enables the person reading it to grasp those talents, which are sometimes unknown and sometimes not enhanced in their fantastic expression.

They are put in the cellar of memories hoping that one day they will awaken with new power. But falling into oblivion, they will be covered with dust and will be no longer used by the soul.

Iris signs can decipher the most hidden individual programmes. They can turn on a light on the darkness of the unconscious, on the projects which have not yet been realized, to receive that force necessary to raise man to a new level. Man is full of evolutionary will.

The work we are presenting in this book wishes to lay the foundations for a future evolution of iridology aimed at understanding the inner forces for a balance of the individual and the couple. First of all we have to grasp our characteristics of expression and request; then we have to move in the direction of a harmony lived for life.

If Man is able to understand how his woman desires to be nourished with love, what her intimate requests are, her needs of absorption, her times and rhythms, then there will be no arid and desert areas. Everything will be shining, each flower will express its etheric power, its essence. The world will be intoxicated by the scent coming from the cosmos and transformed by the couple living on earth. The body will move even before the request, the soul will express its essence even before the other moves. Then we will all be astonished by a dance made almost alone, where the other is within himself/herself, almost annulled in his dimension of spatial physicality.

All this can be experienced even by the female part towards man, the male.

Let's think of the beauty to welcome the expression of love, to create the room necessary to realize a gestation which is expressed in the project for life.

All this can be read on the iris, precisely on the collarette border (B.C.). We will be able to observe the desire to be nourished and that related to the expressive power addressed towards a constructive project.

The extroflexion of the B.C. will express the inner desire of realizing a love, concluding a journey, targeting an intention, settling a goal where to address our inner qualities.

The introflexion of the B.C. attracts within itself each external essence able to start a process of evolution which is not yet visible, observable, identifiable. The need for an inner fecundation, understanding what seed will be necessary to our development, what forces to welcome within our soul in order to express the jewels which have been kept hidden in our cellar for a long time.

Here the human being is activated by a catalytic enzyme initiating a chain reaction that will end as a primordial Big-Bang. So our human existence becomes the expansive force of a new universe.

Inner love gives rise to such an expansive force that will be able to create galaxies expressing harmony, cosmic laws which are not yet known.

Thus people passing by these beings open their eyes wide in astonishment; they observe an evanescent reality without understanding where it comes from and where it resides.

Astonishment and wonder are the feelings of the other, the observer who sees this couple communicating but perceives it as an indivisible single being. He sees the Two but savours the essence of the One.
