

SPACERISK IN HUMAN DIMENSION

LO RITO DANIELE M.D.

CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION.....	pag.	4
SPACERISK.....	pag.	6
EXOGENOUS AND ENDOGENOUS SPACE..	pag.	12
PHYSICAL PSYCHOLOGICAL SPACE.....	pag.	19
SPACE RISK IRIS REFERENCE.....	pag.	48
THE FUNCTIONS OF SPACE.....	pag.	54
IRIS SIGNS.....	pag.	63
CASE STUDIES.....	pag.	65
THE FUTURE OF SPACERISK.....	pag.	69
CONCLUSIONS.....	pag.	72
BIBLIOGRAPHY.....	pag.	75
WORKBOOK.....	pag.	76

Copyright: Daniele Lo Rito

INTRODUCTION

When I began to walk along the path of knowledge of Iridology, I did not think at all that this diagnostic-therapeutic technique could lead me to such a deep inner maturation—and that it could so radically change my way of conceiving the world.

I must thank every patient's iris for all visible and non-visible information given. They have helped me better understand the world and human beings. Perhaps time-space has brought its experience close to my being. I have tried to understand its mechanisms of interaction and protection towards human beings.

It has opened a whole building full of doors upon which thousands of questions have been written. To a few of these questions I have found a reply, but many of them have not been approached yet. I have not perceived the scent they send out yet.

For each question finding a reply, a hundred more will arise. Our life will continue on this path of 'whys' without finding a real end, an end which does not exist. The important thing is to have the awareness of existing, and to reply to that which we know most honestly and sincerely. We must try not to cheat ourselves or others, driven by our will to nourish our Ego. We must accept that which we are given and denied, keeping our inner harmony and equilibrium.

By studying time-space, I have better understood my being and how it is bound to other human beings. I have seen that nobody is disconnected from our brother or sister living next to us, nor are we disconnected from those living far away from us.

Every gesture, every action, causes a powerful remote and invisible reaction that we cannot even perceive—but does exist. To understand this is to consider any thought or action in our daily life as a holy action or gesture, since our thoughts and actions carry a powerful modifying energy with them into the world and cosmos.

We may be little, but we are very powerful, indeed.

SPACERISK

This new study on space has complemented and completed my previous observations about time, almost as if a perfect couple were created—although perhaps not thoroughly experienced and perceived. But it is fully alive and pulsing inside me. Who knows which surprises will be greeting me along this path of experience? Whatever they are, they are welcome to meet my being and way of existing.

All of this is coming after my research on time, its relations to diseases, and to our memory. To study the possibility of locating time on the skin, and to evoke its reaction by means of cutaneous stimulation, we have turned our attention to the dimension of space.

In physics, we have known for a long time that the time-space informative unit is a sole reality, and almost indivisible. If time is to be found on the Collarette Border (CB), where is space? We have realized that space is located on the Inner Pupillary Border (IPB), an anatomic structure due to the posterior sheet of the retina (picture 1).